ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A process for automatically producing software for a computer using components which exist in executable code depicts these components graphically as symbols, wherein an output interface can be connected to an input interface via a directional link. Program code is produced which produces an executable complete program on the basis of the selected directional links.

18